A message to our travel partners

At Expedia Group we believe travel is a force for good. This was true before the global shutdown of travel in 2020 and remains even more true today. Our hope is to use the lessons learnt during this time of adversity to generate opportunity for the whole global travel ecosystem.

This is why we created the Traveller Value Index, new research to understand the impact of the pandemic on traveller behaviour and how COVID-19 will continue to influence booking decisions. More importantly, we examine ways that you, our partner, can adapt to the new world of travel.

The Traveller Value Index reinforces what we've learnt about new expectations on health and safety while pointing towards more industry transformations.

For example, travellers are putting more emphasis on values-based booking decisions, like seeking accommodation that shares their views on inclusivity and sustainability. We've also found that people are so eager to travel—more than a third would swap a salary increase for more holiday days.

We hope this research helps you adapt to these new traveller preferences, and allows you to capture post-pandemic demand.

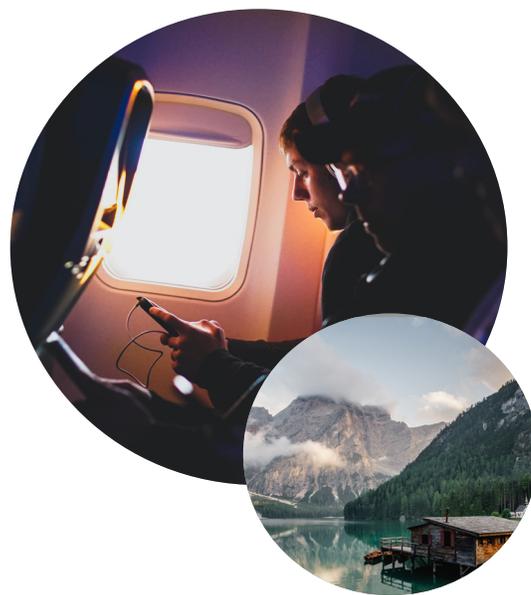

We travel for many reasons: exploring our history at museums, sampling new foods in an outdoor market, holding a newborn family member for the first time and many more. Ultimately, we travel to connect with our humanity. After a year of constant change, we are thrilled to work with you to help our shared customers rediscover the world, reconnect with the people that matter most and rebuild a brighter future, together.

Thank you,
Ariane

What travellers value in 2021

Are people willing to trade a pay rise for more holiday days? Our latest research reveals that more than a third (36%) of travellers would jump at the chance for more time off to live out their holiday dreams post-COVID-19. In fact, nearly three-quarters (72%) say they plan to take a trip in the next 12 months, a surge of optimism welcomed among the community of global travel professionals.

More than a third of people would trade a pay rise for more holiday days.

While industry recovery gains traction in many parts of the world, it's important to reflect on the changes that will define traveller mindsets and shape decision-making in this new reality. Predictable and expected behaviours—from shopping and education to work and travel—were altered by the pandemic.

For the industry, it is critical to meet evolving traveller expectations to capitalise on pent-up demand in the wake of the pandemic. We created the Traveller Value Index to better understand how COVID-19 continues to influence traveller decisions and find out what people are seeking when booking travel. The research uncovered some novel and surprising findings, signalling that industry transformation is on the horizon.

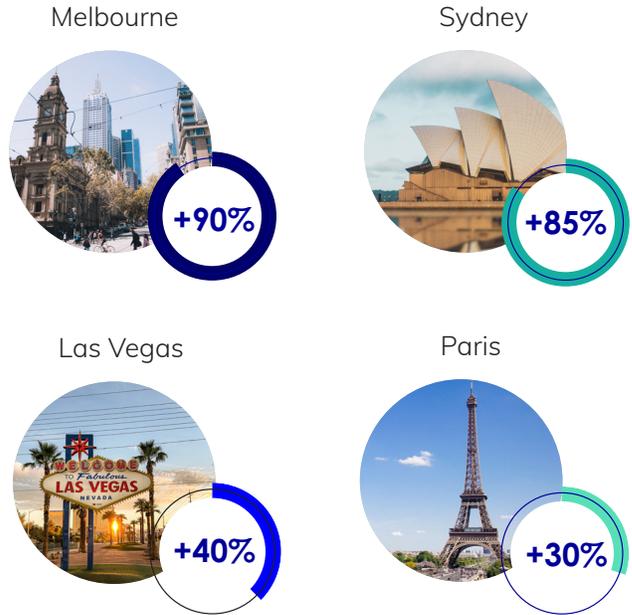

Conducted in partnership with Wakefield Research, this research included a global consumer survey of 8,000 respondents from eight major markets: Australia, Canada, France, Germany, Japan, Mexico, the United Kingdom and the United States.

Promising signals

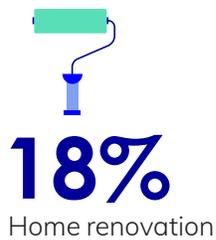

Before diving into specifics on traveller value and the post-pandemic mindset, it is worth reviewing the promising signals that will expand industry recovery in the second half of 2021.

The return of urban escapes: Holiday rentals in remote areas are surging due to the volume of domestic travel to drivable destinations. Most travellers (81%) are considering a trip to a remote area, mountain or small town in the next 18 months.¹

However, city-centric trips are on the rise. Searches for major cities are increasing across our marketplace: Las Vegas, (+40%), Melbourne (+90%), Paris (+30%) and Sydney (+85%).²

Nearly one in five travellers expect travel to be the thing they spend the most on in 2021

Travel is the top priority: More than a third (34%) of travellers have larger travel budgets now compared to 2020. In fact, nearly one in five (18%) expect travel to be the thing they spend the most on in 2021, on par with major spending items like home renovation projects (18%) and ahead of entertainment (12%), buying or taking care of their car (11%) or healthcare (11%). People are also willing to cut back on other expenses to save more for travel.

Our previous research shows that nearly half (43%) of Americans would limit dining out or takeaways and more than a third (38%) would give up alcohol to save money for travel.³

Nearly three-quarters are comfortable with the concept of a vaccine passport.

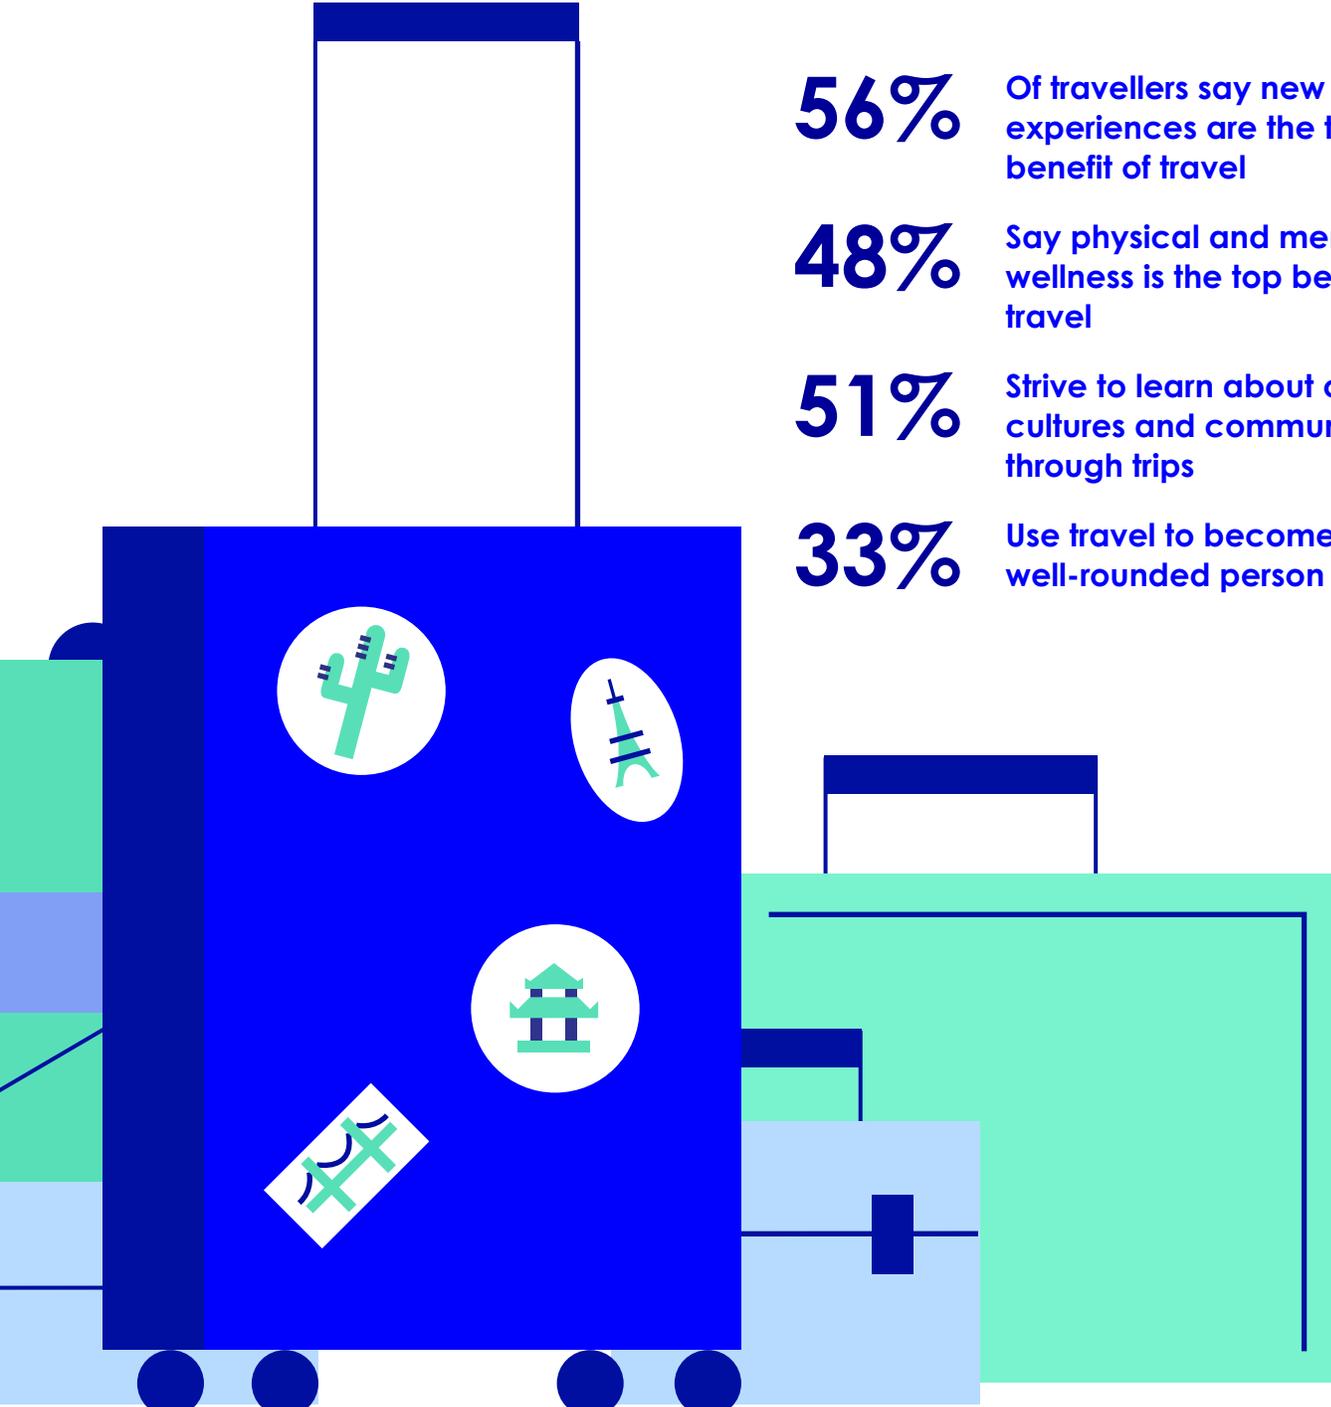

Vaccine passport to the world: Vaccines are key to reopening international travel corridors, and nearly three-quarters (71%) of travellers are comfortable with the concept of a vaccine passport. This is especially pronounced in the United Kingdom, where most travellers (81%) are comfortable with showing proof of vaccination.

Finding meaning

The worldwide pause in travel spurred by the pandemic underscored the importance of being together, and further demonstrated how travel serves as a force for good.

Travel expands world views and deepens understanding between people and places. According to this research:

56% Of travellers say new experiences are the top benefit of travel

48% Say physical and mental wellness is the top benefit of travel

51% Strive to learn about other cultures and communities through trips

33% Use travel to become a more well-rounded person

Three-quarters of travellers are likely to select a destination they've never been to before

The year at home not only created pent-up demand for travel, it also increased the desire for new experiences and places:

New places and experiences: People are ready to use travel to venture outside their comfort zone. Three-quarters of travellers are likely to select a destination they've never been to before—which more than half (53%) say reflects their desire for new experiences. More than half of travellers (52%) who have a trip planned are likely to take a mode of transport they've never taken before. And, nearly a quarter (22%) are seeking once-in-a-lifetime experiences on their next trip.

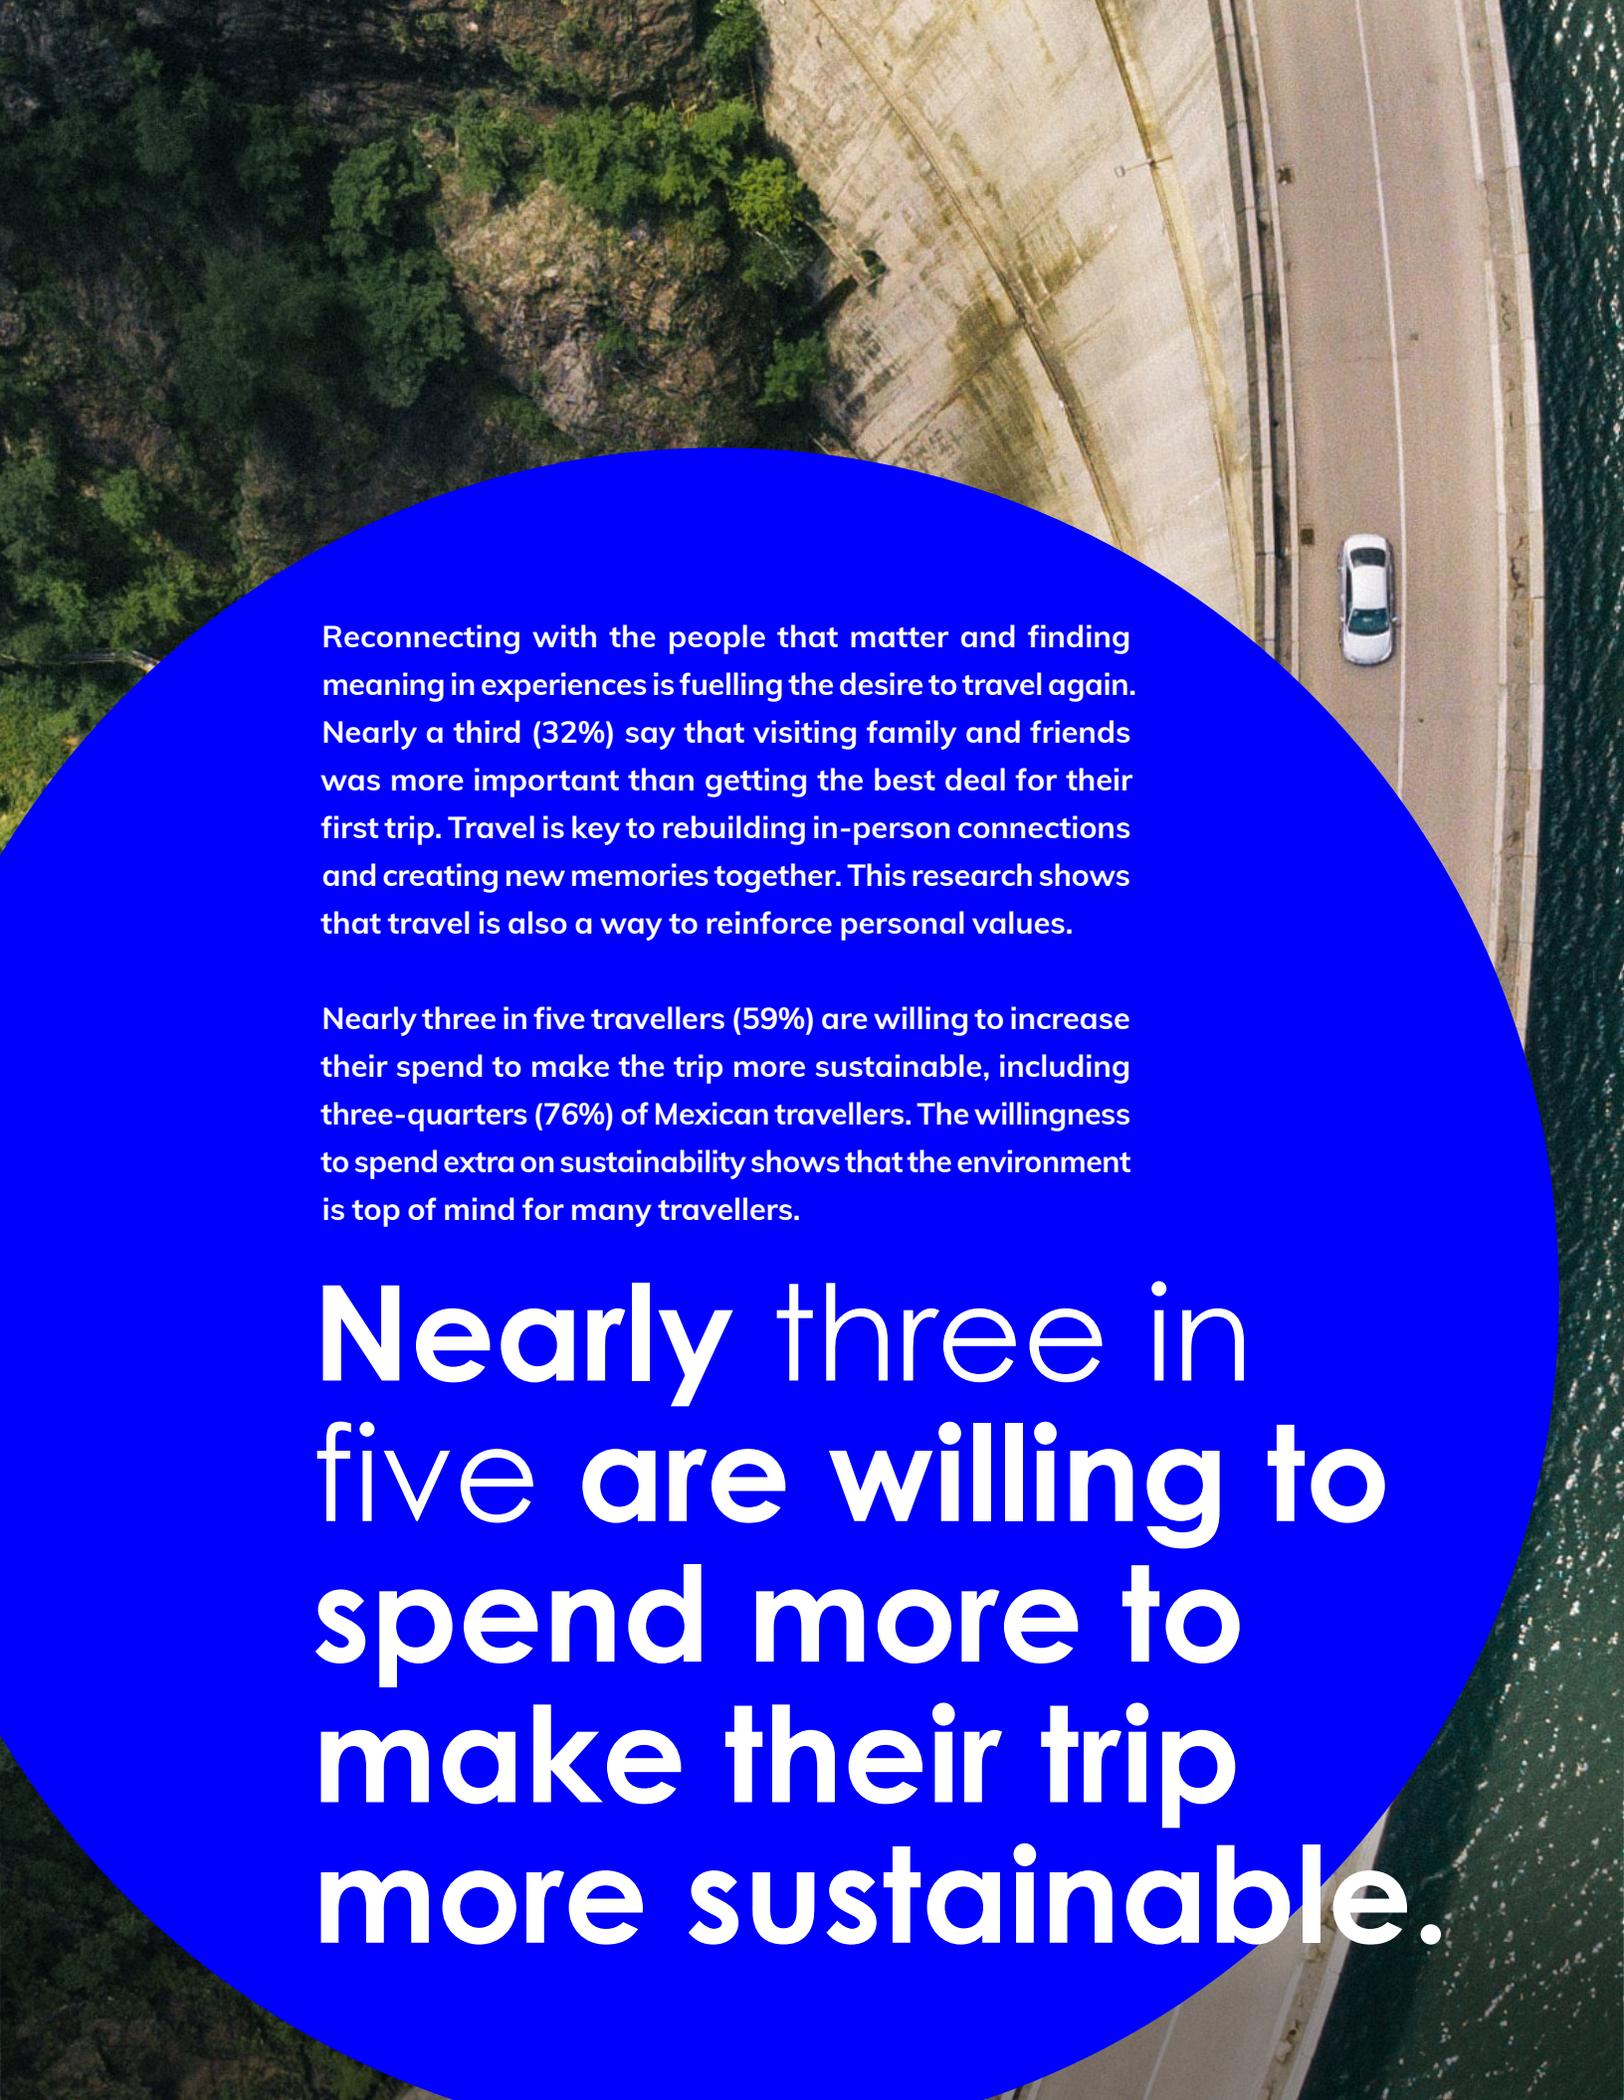

Half of travellers (50%) plan to board a plane in the next 12 months

Back to the air and sea: Half of travellers (50%) plan to board a plane in the next 12 months, while two-thirds overall prefer to drive. In fact, respondents in Australia are most eager to return to the skies and expect to travel by air at nearly the same rate as car for their next trip, at 62% and 65% respectively. One in 10 travellers say they plan to travel by cruise, a significant signal that travel recovery is expanding. In fact, according to our data, nearly half (44%) of new cruise bookings in the US market are for 2021 departures—demonstrating that people want to cruise again as soon as possible.⁴

Booking travel on new sites: Nearly half of travellers (48%) are open to booking through sites and companies they have never used before, if they believe that the travel provider can be trusted.

44% Of new cruise bookings in the US are for 2021 departures

Reconnecting with the people that matter and finding meaning in experiences is fuelling the desire to travel again. Nearly a third (32%) say that visiting family and friends was more important than getting the best deal for their first trip. Travel is key to rebuilding in-person connections and creating new memories together. This research shows that travel is also a way to reinforce personal values.

Nearly three in five travellers (59%) are willing to increase their spend to make the trip more sustainable, including three-quarters (76%) of Mexican travellers. The willingness to spend extra on sustainability shows that the environment is top of mind for many travellers.

Nearly three in five are willing to spend more to make their trip more sustainable.

Nearly two-thirds of travellers (65%) are more likely to book with travel providers that identify their practices as inclusive. This includes properties that are owned by women, welcoming to the LGBTQIA+ community or supportive of people with disabilities. This is particularly important to German travellers, where nearly three-quarters (71%) are more likely to book accommodation with inclusive policies.

How people travel is also changing. According to our research, the interest in international trips—put on hold due the pandemic—is increasing. However, quick getaways close to home remain top of mind for more travellers in the short term.

Close to home, for now: Most travellers (60%) will opt for domestic travel in the short term. However, the outlook for international travel is improving with more than a quarter (27%) of travellers eyeing a trip to another country in the next 12 months. Our exclusive Expedia Group first-party data validates that trend, as nearly 60% of searches for domestic travel fell within the zero- to 21-day search period from January to March 2021.⁵ Germans are most eager to cross the border, with nearly two in five (38%) saying they are likely to take an international trip in the next year.

Quick getaways: More travellers want to take frequent, shorter trips (41%), compared to those who want fewer, longer trips (28%) or a combination of shorter and longer trips (31%). Japan is a hotspot for quick getaways, where most travellers (58%) expect to take more frequent, but shorter trips.

Traveller Value Index

We created the Traveller Value Index to better understand the impact of the pandemic on traveller behaviour and help our travel partners adapt to ever-evolving traveller preferences. The inaugural Traveller Value Index examines seven values shaping how people make decisions about travel by asking respondents to rank the values across multiple travel experiences. The values include:

- 1. Ability to get a full refund
- 2. Atypical, low pricing
- 3. Contactless experience
- 4. Environmentally-friendly policies
- 5. Enhanced cleaning and disinfection
- 6. Flexible policies to change bookings
- 7. First-class benefits and upgrades

Across travel segments—hotels, holiday rentals, air, car hire and cruises—travellers now value full refunds or enhanced cleaning above all other considerations. This is a significant shift from the conventional wisdom that price drives purchasing behaviour. The shift in value from price to flexibility and cleanliness is consistent across the surveyed markets, reflecting the global scope of the pandemic and the universal need to restore stability after a time of vast uncertainty.

#1 value to travellers: The ability to get a refund if their plans change

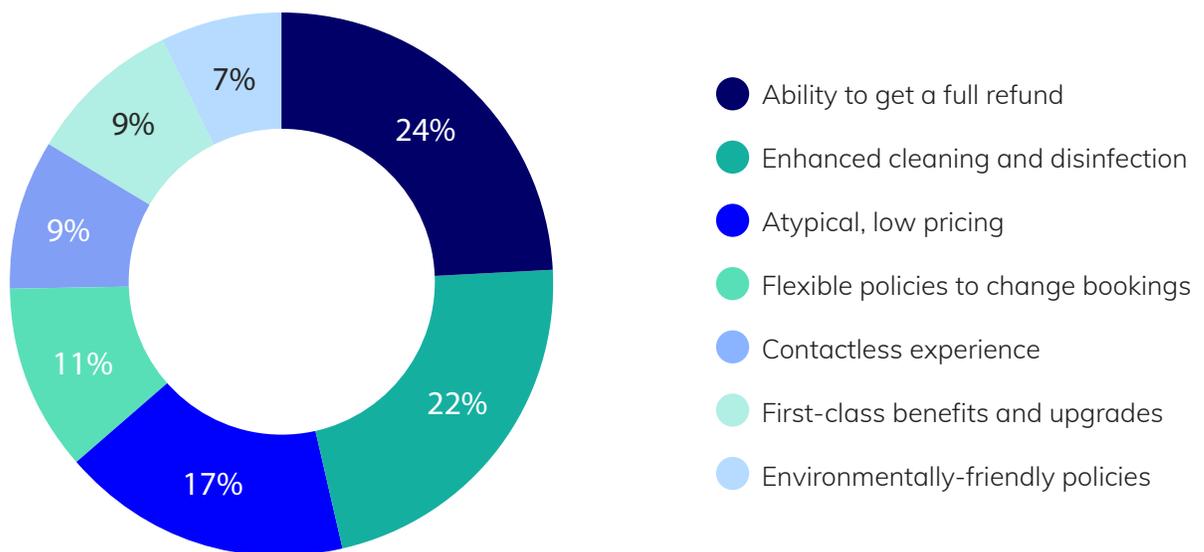

The Traveller Value Index is remarkably consistent at the global level. However, there are noteworthy differences across some demographics, including countries, age, gender and trip type. Understanding the motivations and nuanced distinctions among types of travellers is key to attracting their business. In other words, as travellers demand more flexibility, businesses need to be flexible themselves.

Hotels: Generations split on top consideration

Above all, travellers value the ability to get a full refund on cancelled hotel bookings. However, this value varies across different generational groups. Travellers under the age of 40 in the US and Japan rank enhanced cleaning the most important, while also valuing contactless experiences and premium benefits, indicating that younger groups are less focused on price and refunds.

The lower ranking of full refunds in the US is consistent with our ‘What Travellers Want in 2021’ study, which shows that US travellers are more likely than others to book a non-refundable hotel room in exchange for a reduced rate.⁶

Across regions, higher shares of women select enhanced cleaning as their top value. This is particularly evident in Mexico, where a third (33%) of women rank enhanced cleaning as their top value, compared to just a quarter (25%) of men.

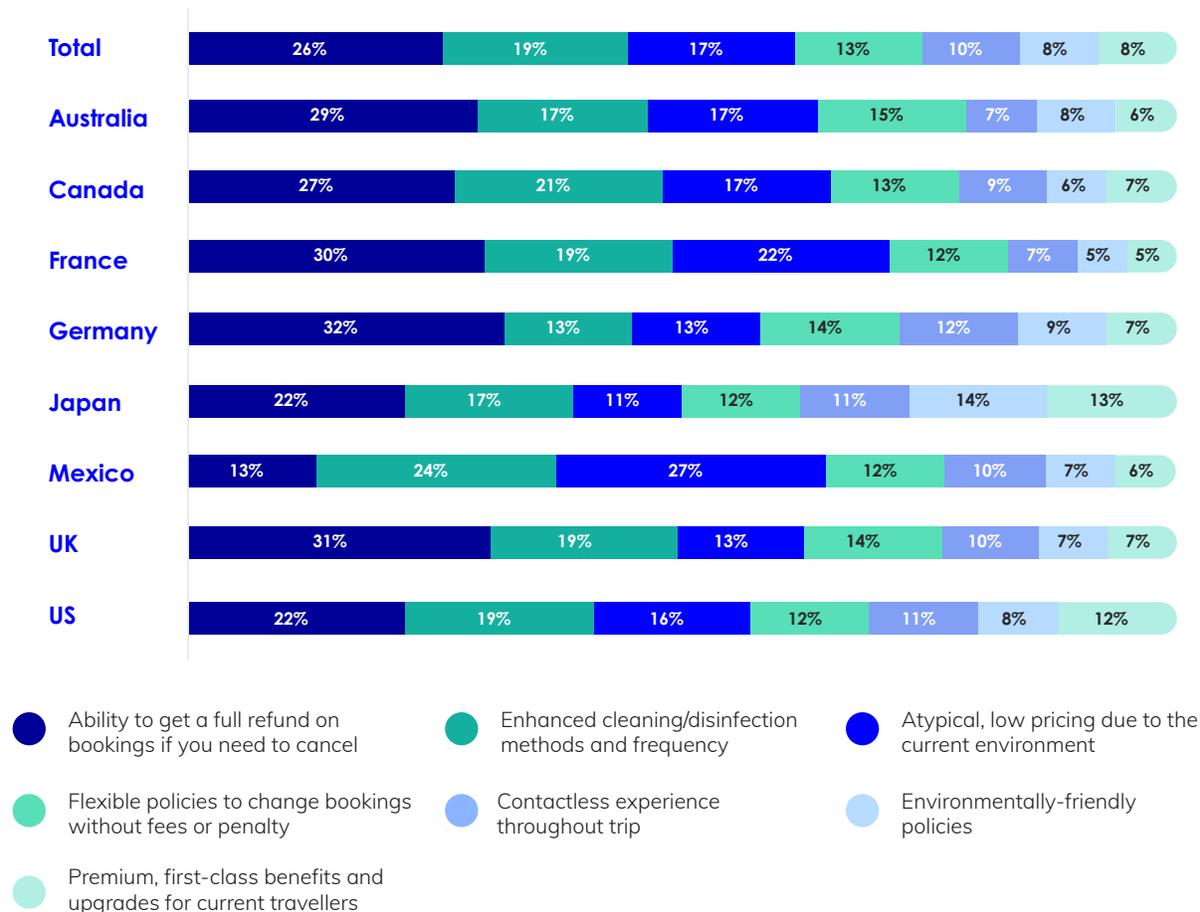

Holiday rentals: Financial security is key

The ability to get a full refund is valued by a larger margin of travellers for holiday rentals, followed by enhanced cleaning methods. Enhanced cleaning does not rank as high for holiday rentals as it does for hotels, potentially due to the perception that holiday rentals are used less and, therefore, are more sanitary.

Travellers in Mexico strongly value affordable pricing for holiday rentals (27%), a trend consistent with our recent ‘What Travellers Want in 2021’ research that shows travellers in Mexico are most likely to filter booking websites by price.⁷

Flexible policies that allow travellers to change their bookings without fees or penalty ranked fourth overall. However, the value of flexibility tends to rise based on the number of children in the travel group. North America is the major standout, where travellers with three or more children rank flexible policies number one overall, showing how flexibility becomes a major consideration when booking family holidays.⁸

Lastly, in Japan, environmentally-friendly policies rank third for holiday rentals (14%), notably higher than its sixth-place ranking across all other markets.

Air: Refunds fly high

Air travellers also most value the ability to get a full refund, notably in the UK (31%) and Germany (34%). Travellers view low pricing and enhanced cleaning as being the next most important values after refunds, ranking them at the same level, with younger travellers being the exception. Millennial and Gen Z travellers love a great deal and rank low pricing ahead of enhanced cleaning.

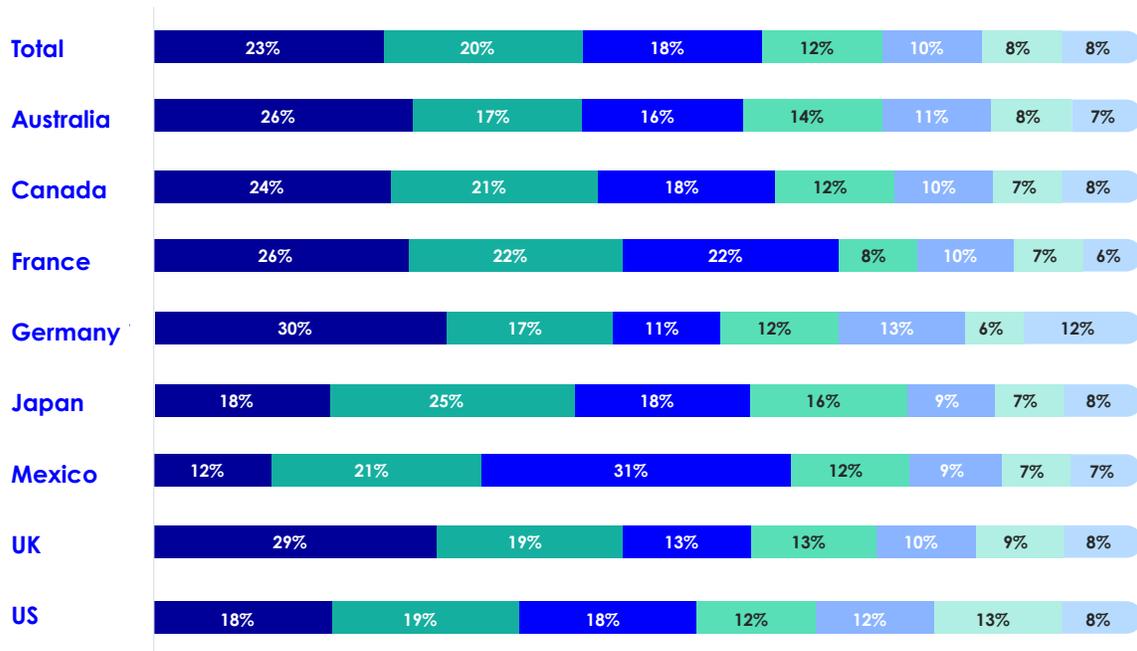

Younger generations also see more value in contactless experiences compared to older generations. This is particularly evident in the US and Canada, where there is a seven-point gap between the percentage of Gen Z respondents who rank the contactless experience as their top value compared to baby boomers.

Car hire: Flexibility over price

The ability to get a full refund is also most valued by travellers when hiring cars, followed by enhanced cleaning. This is consistent with pre-pandemic traveller behaviour and is possibly due to car transport being perceived as lower risk than other methods.

Millennials in the US and Canada value flexibility, ranking the ability to make changes second. The trend of North American millennials valuing flexibility is also evident in air travel, showing how the ability to change plans without penalty is worth more than lower pricing.

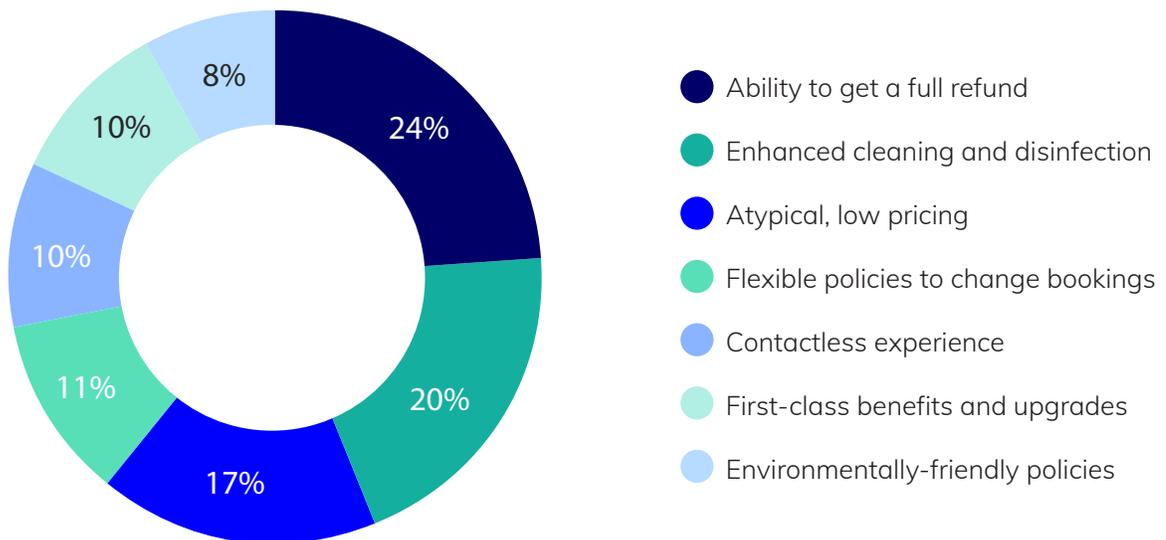

- Ability to get a full refund on bookings if you need to cancel
- Enhanced cleaning/disinfection methods and frequency
- Atypical, low pricing due to the current environment
- Flexible policies to change bookings without fees or penalty
- Contactless experience throughout trip
- Premium, first-class benefits and upgrades for current travellers
- Environmentally-friendly policies

Cruises: The environment is top of mind for younger travellers

Cruise travel is the only segment where respondents from numerous countries rank low pricing as the top value. Both France and Mexico value it above all else, showing that they want to see lower-than-normal pricing when booking cruises. However, in large cruise markets like the US and Canada, travellers most value the ability to get a full refund.

Older generations, especially baby boomers, are more attracted to the ability to get a full refund and enhanced cleaning than younger travellers. While younger generations also rank these highly, they also see value in environmentally-friendly policies. Most notably, Gen Z travellers in North America rank environmentally-friendly policies second, showing that younger age groups consider the environmental impact of cruise trips.

Delivering on promises

Building trust early and quickly with travellers is key to converting their interest into a reservation. When booking trips in the next year, more than half of travellers (53%) want to trust that the provider will deliver on their promises.

When booking trips in the next year, more than half of travellers want to trust that the provider will deliver on their promises.

Building trust online comes with challenges, but a deep understanding of how travellers make decisions can help. Providing clear information about cleanliness measures and cancellation policies will reassure travellers that their financial investment is secure and their safety is top of mind. Travellers also want choice and convenience. Our research shows that many people (52%) want to see a range of prices and options for a specific type of experience, and the ability to book accommodation and transport in one transaction (38%).

Travellers who prefer to book online have specific needs as well. Meeting these needs will build a trusted experience, helping ease any lingering anxieties about returning to travel. For online bookings, many value a site that provides the right price for the type of travel experience they want (57%). Other important considerations include a site that is easy to navigate (49%), a quick booking process (45%), customer support (38%), a high number of listings (32%) and a variety of travel methods (27%). Interestingly, nearly half (48%) of travellers say they are open to booking through companies they have never used before, showing an openness to new experiences and options.

A brighter future

After a period when nothing seemed steady or reliable, familiar patterns are re-emerging in the global travel ecosystem. The arrival of vaccines is restoring freedom of movement and renewing the desire for connection. However, more travellers are seeking experiences that match their own values: trust, connection and inclusion. And, ultimately, travellers want experiences that prioritise their safety and security.

Those in the industry that adapt to and deliver against new traveller values will gain a clear advantage in the race to capture post-pandemic demand.

- Our findings on the importance of cleanliness is consistent with our Travel Recovery Trends Report, which shows that four in five travellers expect to make accommodation decisions based on implemented pandemic measures.⁹ Make sure that your content is up to date and clearly communicate your cancellation policies and cleanliness measures in your marketing and listings.
- As more people get vaccinated and travel restrictions ease, we expect international and domestic travel will continue to increase in 2021 given the pent-up demand. Now is the time to re-engage with marketing across channels and devices to reach travellers eager to explore again.
- More travellers seek accommodations with inclusive policies that welcome all types of travellers or support sustainability efforts. Highlight your commitment to social values in your marketing and listings to build a connection between travellers and your property.
- Build trust with travellers. Ensure you can deliver on the specific amenities, features or policies included in your listing. Provide a range of options and prices, so travellers can ease their anxieties and focus on their upcoming dream holiday.

For more than a year, the world could only dream of travel. For many, that dream was not complete without friends, relatives and for some, the family dog. As travel professionals, we're not just providing a seat or a bed. We're helping people rediscover their world, reconnect with the people that matter most and rebuild a brighter future.
